Eating Raoul: The Musical is a deliciously wicked retro romp. Paul and Mary Bland (a married couple who are still happily chaste) hope to open a restaurant far away from the sexual deviants who surround them in lusty Los Angeles during the swinging 1960's. But their dream is expensive. A fortunate but misguided plan will get them one step closer to owning their country kitchen. Mary and Paul will lure perverts into their apartment with a promise that Mary will fulfill their wildest fantasies, and then Paul will administer a lethal "bop" to the head with a deadly frying pan. Enter Raoul, a hot-blooded Chicano who wants in on the deal (and into Mary's pants). Unable to resist the advances of this sexy Mexican, Mary must ultimately choose between her Latin Lover and her roly-poly faithful foodie hubby. Musical comedy lovers will scream and drool for Eating Raoul. This show is recommended for teens and adults.

Eating Raoul: The Musical is directed by Steven Eubank (The Rocky Horror Show, Reefer Madness, Hedwig and the Angry Inch, Dog Sees God). The cast features: Molly Denninghoff as Mary Bland (Frindle); Dana Nicholson as Paul Bland (The Rose); Francisco "Pancho" Villegas as Raoul (U: Bug: Me, Bare, Once on This Island, Separate Piece); and the Ensemble: Emily Shackleford (Kiss Me Kate); Chioma Anyanwu (Breakfast Club, Lilly's Plastic Purse, Women of Brewster Place); Ashley Otis (The Rocky Horror Show, The Dinosaur Musical, True Confessions of a Go-Go Girl) Pamela Todd (Evil Dead and Worlds of Fun), Price Messick (Life on the Mississippi, Kiss Me Kate, Rocky Horror Show, Seussical) Ethan Miller (Time of Your Life), Eric Harbin (The Rocky Horror Show, Worlds of Fun Live Entertainment) and Jonathan Hornyak (newcomer to Kansas City).
